Guilty plea comes in Tacony dungeon case

House of horrors. Years after disabled people were discovered being held prisoner in a basement, the "jailer" pleads guilty.

The accused leader of a ring that held disabled people as captives to collect their social security benefits pleaded guilty in federal court today in a deal that took the death penalty off the table.

The deal means that Linda Weston, 55, will be sentenced to life in prison plus 80 years for kidnapping, slavery, sex trafficking and benefits fraud in a case that stunned the nation and led to the first federal prosecution for hate crimes under new laws to protect the disabled.

Philadelphia police in 2011 discovered four of Weston's victims in a dank basement of a Tacony apartment building, chained to a boiler in a room that smelled like death with three emaciated dogs.

The subsequent investigation led to more horrors.

Prosecutors said the ring used the promise of romantic relationships to lure people with mental and physical disabilities into captivity.

They were held in basements, and in closets, moving from house to house in Texas, Florida, Virginia and Philadelphia to stay one step ahead of authorities.

Prosecutors said the eight victims were forced to sleep nude, often on top of pink fiberglass insulation that lined the unfinished attic in one of the houses they rented.

Sedatives were put in their food, which they received so rarely that some resorted to eating feces. Female captives were forced to cook, clean and work as prostitutes.

It was hard to square the image of a hardened psychopath who held disabled people captive for a decade with what appeared in court.

Weston appeared in a green prison jumpsuit, telling the court that she had dropped out of school in the 4th grade.

She could barely spell her middle name — Ann — though it was unclear whether that was due to nerves, educational attainment or psychiatric medication she is currently taking.

Weston at one point pleaded not guilty, leaving the court stunned and silent.

"Oh, guilty," Weston said, correcting herself.

Defense attorneys said Weston pleaded guilty to spare her family the ongoing embarrassment a trial would bring.

"Nothing that Ms. Weston caused or was part of was something that she or herself did not go through," said a member of Weston's defense team, Patricia McKinney. "This has been an ongoing thing with the Weston family."

Weston had previously been convicted of starving her sister's boyfriend to death in the 1980s.

Two other people, Jean McIntosh and Eddie Wright, have already pleaded guilty and are awaiting trial. Gregory Thomas and Nicklaus Woodard are awaiting trial.

Murderabilia

Weston's 'art' sold online

Weston's purported drawings and letters have popped up for sale on an online "murderabilia" store which sells merchandise related to famous criminals.

Kelly Hutchison, a San Diego artist who runs Darkvomit.com, told Metro, "I do find the art and letters of Linda's to be quite fascinating. ... Her handwriting is childlike and her writing is very erratic. The drawings that she includes with her letters do not make any sense and they are so bizarre and weird."

The drawings, for sale from $65 to $85, were allegedly sold off by a "pen pal" of Weston's, he said. They include childlike poetry and a drawing of one of the Seven Dwarfs masturbating.

Weston's lawyer declined to comment on the items, several of which are still up for sale.

You can sleep in a tent during pope's visit

Papal pilgrims could be staying in one of these when the pope comes. / WIKIMEDIA COMMONS

Yes, you can sleep in a tent during Pope Francis' visit.

If Airbnb is too newfangled, and hotels too hoity-toity, there is a new option for visitors who want to see the pope later this month: East Fairmount Park, located right next to the Strawberry Mansion section of the city.

Pilgrims can pay about $199 for the privilege of sleeping in a tent of the weekend of the papal visit, organizers have announced.

We'd call it camping, but open flames aren't allowed — which means no campfires and no s'mores.

The campground, called Francis Fields, is located near 33rd and Diamond — a 2-mile walk to the Benjamin Franklin Parkway — and can hold 16,000 people.

In addition to the $199 charge for camping there are additional fees to park a car. It'll cost $99 to use a parking lot and $109 to park near the tent. Bringing an RV will cost $999.

Showers cost $5.

Organizers promise there will be food vendors serving breakfast, lunch and dinner. DAN KELLEY

Beekeepers, the Airbnb bubble bursts and more

Increasingly, Philly rooftops and balconies are becoming homes to honeybee colonies. There are 350 of them, according to a recent official count, tended to by 150 members of the Philadelphia Beekeepers Guild, which will soon hold their annual Honey Festival. This week, on the eve of the guild's annual Honey Festival, City Paper food editor Jenn Ladd visited with local urban beekeepers to find out the appeal of their hobby.

Prisons Commissioner Louis Giorla discusses the charges, along with U.S. Attorney Zane Memeger, center, and FBI Special Agent in Charge William F. Sweeney, Jr. / SAM NEWHOUSE

Feds: Guards smuggled drugs in jail

Corruption. Prosecutors announced smuggling charges Wednesday against six Philly prison guards.

The head of Philadelphia prisons offered a stern warning Wednesday to employees who dare to smuggle contraband to inmates: "You'll be next."

Philadelphia Prisons Commissioner Louis Giorla's message came after prosecutors charged four current and two former guards with allegedly smuggling 681 Oxycontin pills and five cellphones to inmates inside city jails.

Guards purportedly made $500 to $1,500 off delivering the contraband, U.S. Attorney Zane Memeger announced at a press conference on Wednesday.

"We're here to keep a clean, safe and orderly environment," Giorla said. "To any officers who are considering this type of activity, I would recommend that they refrain from it and to any that may be engaged in this stuff — you'll be next."

Guards at Curran-Fromhold Correctional Facility (CFCF), the Detention Center, the House of Corrections and the Philadelphia Industrial Correction Center were charged.

"We have 2,800 inmates [at CFCF]. Probably more than half of them are drug offenders, they're going to seek drugs, try and find ways to corrupt the system and manipulate the system," Giorla said. "It's a day-to-day battle."

A rise in the confiscation of streets drugs from inmates as well as the recent smuggling arrest of prison guard Dion Reid led prison officials in cooperation with prosecutors to a "deeper investigation" into how contraband was reaching the prison, Giorla said.

The guards were charged with attempted distribution of narcotics and attempted extortion were John Wesley Herder, 49, a nine-year veteran; Bryant Fields, 43, George Kindle, 29, Marc Thompson, 23, Dupree Myers, 27 and Joseph Romano, 31.

Each allegedly delivered Oxycontin pills and in some cases cellphones in exchange for cash payments ranging from $500 to $1,500, prosecutors said.

Philly prison guard union head Lorenzo North said he was "disturbed" by the charges but would stand behind the officers while charges are pending.

Fattah Jr. seeks to split up grouped charges

Scales of justice. Embattled congressman's son continues to fight his own fraud case in federal court.

Chaka Fattah Jr. outside Philly federal court after a hearing.
SAM NEWHOUSE

As his Congressman dad Chaka Fattah Sr. is very publicly fighting a federal corruption indictment, Chaka Fattah Jr. is filing a motion to split up the criminal charges against him just weeks ahead of his trial date.

"The federal government has violated nearly every rule in pursuing this case against me, and there are rules dealing with how charges are grouped together for a criminal trial," said Fattah Jr., who is representing himself in the federal fraud trial and insisted that the motion to sever he filed Wednesday in federal court is not an attempt to delay his trial.

Fattah Jr. was indicted in July 2014 on charges of bank loan fraud, tax evasion and for inflating costs on a School District of Philadelphia contract for a charter school he worked with as a consultant.

But the conduct at issue ranges in time from 2005 to 2012, Fattah Jr. said, calling the prosecution "the kitchen sink approach."

"I'm asking for there to be multiple trials. The allegations just don't relate to each other," he said. "If they were to separate the trial it would make it easier for the jury to compartmentalize the issues, so the government can't confuse the jurors."

The indictment stems from Fattah Jr.'s work as owner and proprietor of 259 Consulting, in which capacity he worked for Delaware Valley Charter Schools, an educational program for troubled youths.

Quoted

"I'm asking for there to be multiple trials. The allegations just don't relate to each other."

World Meeting of Families

Ten thousand more free pope tickets released

Organizers from the World Meeting of Families made 10,000 tickets available Wednesday night to see Pope Francis celebrate Mass on the Ben Franklin Parkway on Sunday, Sept. 27.

The ticket giveaway comes one day after the archdiocese made another batch of tickets available to see the pope address immigration on Independence Mall — only to see some of those tickets — given away for free — appear on eBay and Craigslist for hundreds of dollars.

Organizers said anywhere from one to two million people could attend the papal mass — a crowd so large that some in attendance may not be able to see the pope.

About 40 Jumbotrons will be set up around the event area. METRO

Bush would use the power of persuasion to overcome Democratic opposition to his plan. / GETTY IMAGES

Bush says tax reform would bring jobs home, slams Trump

2016. Bush is one of a crowded field vying to be the Republican nominee for the presidential election.

Rate

Bush took aim at Trump and Democrats in vowing to reduce the U.S. corporate rate to 20 percent from 35 percent as a way of persuading American companies abroad to move jobs home to take advantage of favorable tax rates.

Republican presidential candidate Jeb Bush laid out a tax reform proposal on Wednesday that he touted as encouraging U.S. businesses abroad to bring jobs home and avoiding erecting protectionist walls that he said are backed by rival Donald Trump.

Bush, fighting for position in a Republican field now largely dominated by Trump, said in a speech in Garner, North Carolina, that his tax plan would include reductions that would mean 42 million middle-class families would see their income tax rate cut by a third.

And while Democrats attacked Bush for backing a reduction in the top income tax rate for the highest earners, from 39.6 percent to 28 percent, Bush said that with tax deductions eliminated, people who make $200,000 or more would bear a greater share of the tax burden.

Real estate mogul Trump, whom Bush accuses of being a Democrat in disguise, has repeatedly attacked the trade policies of China and Mexico and has vowed to retaliate if elected president.

"Now those on the left, and even some people who call themselves Republicans, will tell you that to save U.S. jobs, we have to throw up a bunch of walls and tariffs and protect our businesses from competition," Bush said. "That's a siren call of surrender and I won't go for it. Protectionism never works."

Bush's plan echoes a number of Republican ideas that have fallen short of congressional approval, such as eliminating the estate tax on assets left by people when they die. REUTERS

Baby survives after drinking vodka in formula

A 6-week-old girl in Wisconsin who was mistakenly given baby formula mixed with two shots of vodka was expected to be released from a hospital on Wednesday, police said.

The baby had a blood alcohol level of 0.294, more than three times the legal limit for an adult driver, after receiving the vodka-tainted formula on Monday night, Kenosha police spokesman Bradley Hetlet said.

Hetlet said investigators believe it was a mistake and the girl's parents will not be charged for the alcohol incident. Her father was charged separately for altercations that ensued after the girl began to suffer from the alcohol, he said.

Hetlet said the girl's mother told police she filled a container with water to be used for the baby's bottle, set it on a kitchen counter and left the room. The girl's father entered the kitchen, emptied the container and filled it with vodka, intending to take the water bottle to a friend's home.

When the mother returned to the kitchen, she mixed about two ounces of the liquid with baby formula and fed her baby, Hetlet said. The parents realized the error when the child began acting abnormally, he said. REUTERS

By 2025. McDonald's in US, Canada to use only cage-free eggs

McDonald's Corp.'s 16,000 U.S. and Canadian restaurants will serve only eggs laid by cage-free chickens within 10 years, the company said on Wednesday.

McDonald's USA has been buying more than 13 million cage-free eggs annually since 2011. The long-awaited switch is happening as North American egg suppliers are slowly starting to rebuild flocks after the worst bird flu outbreak in U.S. history.

The move comes as McDonald's, the world's biggest restaurant chain, is preparing to serve breakfast all day at U.S. outlets in October. McDonald's USA, which is fighting sagging sales, made waves in March by announcing a two-year plan to phase out meat from chickens raised with antibiotics used to fight human infections.

McDonald's buys about 2 billion eggs annually for its U.S. restaurants and 120 million for Canada to serve breakfast items such as the Egg McMuffin and Egg White Delight.

Fast-food rival Burger King already has committed to using only cage-free eggs by 2017. Other large companies such as Starbucks Corp., General Mills Inc., Nestle, Sodexo Inc. and Aramark also are in the process of switching.

Groups such as the Humane Society of the United States (HSUS), Mercy for Animals and World Animal Protection have successfully lobbied many companies to adopt animal welfare practices. REUTERS

Survey: Increased number of sharks off East Coast

The survey takes place in April and May and begins off the coast of Florida where sharks spend the winter and spring and follows their migration route to Delaware as waters warm. / GETTY IMAGES

On the rise. The numbers have increased in each survey since 2001 and point to steady population gains.

U.S. shark researchers caught and tagged 2,835 sharks along the East Coast this spring, a record number which they say reflects a growing population thanks to federal protections.

It surpassed the 1,831 sharks captured and tagged in 2012 during the survey, which is conducted every three years by the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration.

The increased shark count comes in the wake of a spate of shark attacks on swimmers this summer off the coast of Florida and the Carolinas, though researchers say the annual trend is about normal.

Sharks were on the decline in 1986 when the first survey took place during a worldwide boom in commercial shark fin fisheries to feed Asian markets.

U.S. protections for sharks in a fishery management plan went into effect in 1993. The plan banned fishing for certain sharks and limited fishing seasons for others, among other rules.

"I think that's what turned it around — effective management. Just the decrease in fishing pressure on these species has helped quite a bit," said Lisa Natanson, a scientist who leads the survey at the Narragansett Laboratory of NOAA Fisheries' Northeast Fisheries Science Center. REUTERS

Hungary border poses challenge

For the migrants slipping across the Hungarian border, it is just one more challenge on their way to a new life further west. For the police officers sent to try to manage the influx, it's a task some find exhausting and thankless.
In the small hours of Wednesday, hundreds of refugees crossed from Serbia, passing police huddling around a campfire and joining other migrants sleeping wrapped in blankets against the bitter cold. Hungary is one of four central European countries that have been resisting pressure to accept mandatory quotas to redistribute some of the hundreds of thousands of migrants flooding into Europe to flee war and poverty in the Middle East, Africa and Asia. Five things you need to know

1 Group urges GOP candidates to defund Planned Parenthood

An influential conservative group is calling on Republican presidential candidates to vow they will veto any future funding for women's health care provider Planned Parenthood, which is under fire from abortion opponents.

In a letter seen by Reuters that is being sent to all party hopefuls in the 2016 White House race, the ForAmerica advocacy group asks candidates to make "a firm commitment" to starve Planned Parenthood of federal funding.

ForAmerica Chairman Brent Bozell — who has personally endorsed Republican Senator Ted Cruz for 2016 — also calls on the candidates to say whether they would launch an investigation by the Department of Justice into Planned Parenthood.

ForAmerica has a 7.7 million-member online presence, which in the past has bombarded Republican congressional leadership with phone calls and emails to promote conservative positions.

Republicans have turned their sights on Planned Parenthood again since an anti-abortion group began posting secretly recorded videos online. The center says the tapes show Planned Parenthood engaged in illegal sales of fetal tissue.

Planned Parenthood counters that the videos were distorted and says that it did nothing wrong. REUTERS

2 Defiant clerk's backers want aides fired over marriage licenses to gays

Supporters of Kentucky county clerk Kim Davis, who refused to issue marriage licenses to gay couples due to her religious beliefs, said on Wednesday that any of her deputies who provide such documents without her permission should be fired.

Ante Pavkovic, one of the people who helped organize pro-Davis rallies outside the Grayson, Kentucky, detention center where Davis was jailed, lectured the deputy clerks not to violate their oaths of office, like Judge Bunning and the U.S. Supreme Court justices who backed gay marriage did. 3 Nine possible shootings along Arizona interstate

The number of possible vehicle shootings along a stretch of freeway in Phoenix has jumped to nine over the last 10 days, the head of Arizona's state police said.

Col. Frank Milstead, director of the Arizona Department of Public Safety, said the attacks continued following two possible shootings early Tuesday on Interstate 10, the southernmost transcontinental highway in the U.S.

The shootings began on Aug. 29 along a roughly 10-mile segment of the highway when gunfire shattered the windshield of a sport utility vehicle, authorities said. REUTERS

4 Cincinnati police chief fired amid low department morale

Cincinnati Police Chief Jeffrey Blackwell was fired on Wednesday, according to a memo from the city manager citing low department morale and a hostile work environment.

City Manager Harry Black also said Blackwell had not provided necessary leadership and had disregarded the chain of command. Black said morale at the department was at an unprecedented low and Blackwell's leadership style had created a work environment of hostility and retaliation.

Assistant Chief Eliot Isaac has been appointed interim police chief. REUTERS

5 Instagram opens up to advertisers worldwide

Instagram opened its platform to most advertisers across the globe on Wednesday as the photo-sharing app seeks to make more money and compete with rivals.

Ads, previously available only in eight countries, will debut in 20 others including Italy, Spain and India. More than 200 countries will have ads by Sept. 30.

With 300 million monthly active users, Instagram has a key advantage over rivals because parent Facebook Inc.'s vast trove of consumer data allows it to target audiences more accurately, a major selling point for advertisers. REUTERS

Tech. Apple TV comes with 'apps'; big iPad aimed at business

Apple Chief Executive Tim Cook unveiled a new version of its Apple TV product with an app store and a voice-controlled remote control, part of a trio of announcements aimed at revamping its product line.

Cook described the new Apple TV, a product which the company long called a "hobby," as the future of television, offering personalization and ease of use.

The announcement came after Cook showed off a big new iPad aimed at business customers, which has an optional "Pencil" stylus and keyboard. He also began describing an updated pair of iPhones that feature a so-called "3-D touch' interface and other upgrades.

"People love to hate Apple announcements because the expectations are so high and they can never clear that bar," said Kevin Landis, portfolio manager of the $111 million Firsthand Technology Opportunities fund, which has Apple as its second-largest position.

Demonstrations of the new Apple TV showed tricks to make viewing easier: Digital assistant Siri, which is behind the voice control, can rewind a video for 15 seconds and turn on subtitles, when a viewer asks something like "What did she say?"

Twitter users were generally impressed with Apple TV, with some people joking that they would have to buy a TV to use the Siri remote and app store. REUTERS

Emails held abroad

Microsoft urges US court to block warrant

Microsoft asked a federal appeals court on Wednesday to block the U.S. government from forcing the company to hand over a customer's emails stored on an Irish server, warning that the precedent would create a "global free-for-all" that eviscerates personal privacy.

The case, the first in which a U.S. company has challenged a warrant seeking data held abroad, has captured the attention of the technology industry, privacy advocates and news organizations.

The appeal is centered on a search warrant seeking the emails of an individual in Dublin, as part of a drug investigation. The person has not been identified.

THE WORD

Ned Ehrbar takes on the world of gossip.

NED EHRBAR
@Nedrick
ned.ehrbar@metro.us

1 How about a postdivorce, intra-'Voice' romance?

There's a delightful kind of symmetry to this new gossip item about "The Voice" judges Gwen Stefani and Blake Shelton possibly becoming an item in the wake of their respective divorces. It's all just so streamlined and convenient. I love it. "They're really into each other. Let's face it, they were both unhappily married when they met," a source tells In Touch. "Now their divorce proceedings are something they can talk about and commiserate over." (Maybe don't use that in the vows, though?)

Apparently they've been doing more than just commiserating. While it seems odd for the singer of No Doubt to be getting down with country star Shelton, apparently he's completely smitten with her. Shelton "is in awe of her career, talent and business savvy," the source explains. "And she has been reveling in the attention. When they're not together, Blake has been calling her, too. He's even given her some small gifts." For folks at this level, what constitutes "small"?

ALL PHOTOS GETTY IMAGES

2 Someone's shopping sexy photos of Taylor Swift

Back in January, hackers insisted they had some nude photos of Taylor Swift they could leak, but Swift laughed off the claims, insisting no such photos existed. Well, things might have changed. The folks over at Radar Online say they've been approached by a Swift confidant looking to sell a steamy photo of Swift and boyfriend Calvin Harris. The site's editors are patting themselves on the back for seeing the photo but refusing to buy it, but they do confirm it is "certainly not meant for public eyes." So, what's the deal here? Is Swift the victim of a squad member gone rogue? Or is this all part of some elaborate scheme on her part to get herself a more grown-up image? And should you take it as a kind of insult if a tabloid isn't interesting in buying your nudes?

3 Ellen really hated doing 'American Idol'

Regrets? Ellen DeGeneres has a few. And chief among them is agreeing to be a judge on "American Idol" back in 2010. "That's one of the worst decisions I've made," DeGeneres tells Howard Stern during an interview, admitting that she "hated" her time on the show. That's quite a statement, honestly, and she's not the first former judge to speak out about the show. In May, Mariah Carey admitted during a radio interview that her tenure on the hit reality series was pretty terrible, too. "That was the worst experience of my life," Carey said. "I'm not going to get into what it was, but let's just say I don't think they had any intentions for us to have a good experience doing that show."

Yikes. Good thing it's ending after the upcoming season, yeah? So what is it about the show that made these folks so unhappy? Could it just be that, thanks to the tone set by founding judge Simon Cowell, everyone just comes away with a tendency toward hyperbole? That's just the worst.

4 Sienna Miller on the 'curse of motherhood'

Sienna Miller just needs to vent, OK? The actress and new mom — who recently split from Tom Sturridge, the father of her young daughter — gets refreshingly candid with British Vogue about how taxing all this being a parent stuff can be. "Obviously when you have a baby it's the most incredible experience, but your life is also catapulted into this chaos and you are exhausted. I could literally get on this table and fall asleep," she says. "That's the curse of motherhood — we just run ourselves ragged. I'm just trying to get a sense of what that guilt is. I sometimes feel like it's a totally invented emotion. It's strange to be punishing ourselves this way. It's not healthy."

As for her feelings on the breakup? Well, it's not much sunnier — but at least her career is on track. "It's been really quite overwhelming recently, just with the volume of everything going on," she admits. "Everything is shifting. It's actually been the s—tiest year, and amazing. It's always yin and yang. I feel like if you're excelling in one area, it's hard to manage both, and I do feel like the work is going really well."

Daily video

SCREEN JUNKIES, YOUTUBE

Honest Trailers — 'The Happening'

Honestly, I'm surprised it took the Honest Trailers guys this long to get to this, but it was worth the wait. The snarky movie fans take on M. Night Shyamalan's most infamous turkey, "The Happening," and its killer shrubberies — and appropriately re-dub it "one of the best laugh-out-loud comedies of 2008." Ouch. And speaking of ouch, "Mark Wahlberg delivers a Donnie Wahlberg-level performance." Trees, man. Trees.

Jackie Chan moves from smackdowns to story

Interview. The legendary actor and martial artist stretches himself with the new "Dragon Blade."

Jackie Chan (and facial hair) plays a former patrol commander trying to help a disgraced Roman commander (John Cusack) in "Dragon Blade," now on VOD. / LIONSGATE PREMIERE

A few years back, it seemed Jackie Chan had aged out of action. He's now 61, and even five years ago, with the "Karate Kid" remake, Chan was away from the fighting, content to play mentor to Jaden Smith. But he's still got it and is still willing to do it, if not to the extremes of his heyday. In "Dragon Blade," a $65 million Chinese production, Chan plays a disgraced Han dynasty-era patrol commander who teams up with a disgraced Roman commander (John Cusack) to take on an evil, hammy consul (Adrien Brody).

"Dragon Blade" is more reliant on story than your past films, which front-loaded the action. Is that a reflection of you getting up in years or of something else?
My action style has changed as the audiences' expectations have changed. When you look at my previous films, I was fighting from the opening credits to the closing credits. But now the audience is much more sophisticated and wants a story. With a strong story, even a single punch can make the audiences cheer the house down. All those years, I was jumping off tall buildings and leaping off moving buses. So stupid!

"Dragon Blade" has moments of tragedy but also moments of comedy, with you sometimes making funny faces during fights. How do you work to combine those two tones?
Now audiences around the world are different. They love not only action but also a film's story. They want emotion! In fact, having a strong plot helps the action sequences develop much more naturally. So I'm learning to combine drama and action, not just comedy and action. But I'm still making action comedies.

This is a case where American actors come over to China to make one of your movies. How did you integrate them into the production?
Both John and Adrien were really nice and hardworking. Many Chinese actors should learn from them. Adrien is a world-famous, Oscar-winning actor, but he had no assistant with him. Can you believe that? He came to China by himself. He even carried his own luggage. I feel that's a bit too low-key actually; at least he should have brought a translator with him. I assigned one of my own people to him.

One curious thing is that John and Adrien don't like to have people around them when they're acting. They can't perform at their best when there are hundreds of people around them. They need to concentrate. But actually, when I have to do an emotional scene, I'm the same. How can you act sincerely when there are people all around you? So I think I've learned something from that which will make me a better actor.

MATT PRIGGE

Bonus thoughts

The future

Are there stunts you'd still like to do in the future?
It depends on the story. It's true that I'm no longer doing those crazy stunts from my younger years. But I still want to satisfy my audience, who always expects authenticity from me. My next film is set on the railway tracks in 1930s Manchuria, so I'm sure you'll see me going one-to-one with locomotives. That's going to be a challenge, and I think it will give audiences something new again.

Do you see yourself doing more drama in the future?
Yes, I want to try many different genres. I hope that people consider me as an actor that does action rather than just an action star.

So you can expect to see me in many different roles.

Twenty One Pilots on 'Blurryface' and initially turning down the VMAs

Interview. Tyler Joseph gets honest — real honest — about his lyrics and the crazy MTV Video Music Awards drama you didn't see on TV.

Josh Dun and Tyler Joseph of Twenty One Pilots / JABARI JACOBS

When we catch up with Tyler Joseph, one half of alternative hip-hop duo Twenty One Pilots, it's days after their MTV Video Music Awards performance and the weekend before the start of their U.S. tour.

Joseph and partner Josh Dun are promoting their new album "Blurryface," which reached No. 1 on the Billboard 200 chart and had multiple singles in the iTunes Top 10 the first few weeks after its May 18 release. It's the busiest time in their lives, but Joseph talked with us at length about the darkness behind his lyrics and what we didn't see on TV while watching the VMAs.

Behind the VMAs

Twenty One Pilots and ASAP Rocky nailed their VMA performance, but Joseph says it almost didn't happen. "MTV came to us and said we got to play the VMAs, but there was a catch — we had to perform with a particular artist," Joseph says. "When they told us who the artist was, we decided [the collaboration] didn't make sense so we said no." MTV came back to the duo and suggested ASAP Rocky instead, and the guys said yes. But because of their European tour, they didn't meet until just two days before the performance.

"We rented out a rehearsal space to hash out our ideas and, to be honest, the first six hours were not going well at all," Joseph says. "We were not connecting creatively. Honestly, there was a moment when Rocky and I looked at each other, like, this is not going to work." Of course, the guys made it happen and it became one of the buzziest performances of the night.

Brutal honesty

One big reason for the duo's success is the honesty behind their lyrics. On the new album, Joseph created a character, Blurryface, to represent his personal insecurities and struggles. "The character not only helped me write the record, but also to continue to perform it live," he says. "I love [performing], but there's also something that's really hard about it, just the transparency and vulnerability."

He says writing the record was emotionally exhausting: "When I was done, I felt completely drained, like everything I've ever wanted to say has been said." But luckily for fans, that's not the case. In fact, he's writing again and already thinking of the next record. "That voice that longs to say something important has come back to life," he says.

Will Givenchy democratize New York Fashion Week?

Mais non! Givenchy designer Riccardo Tisci is bringing the Paris label to NYC — and opening the show up to the hoi polloi. On the invite list: 1,200 regular Joes. Quelle horreur!

Will we (finally) have a post-gender, post-racial runway?

Sure, the runways may still be predominantly white, but there's no denying casting directors are starting to branch out. Model Madeline Stuart, who has Down syndrome, will walk FTL Moda, while Winnie Harlow, an "America's Next Top Model" vet who has a skin condition, promises to return after last season's splash. Eckhaus Latta won accolades last season for its diverse lineup and so did Chromat and Kanye West for showing a wide(r) range of bodies and colors. Will other designers follow suit? Let's hope yes.

The seven juiciest gossip items at NYFW

New York Fashion Week officially starts Thursday, and this season is no less full of rumors, controversies and speculations than previous ones. Here's everything you need to know to keep up with it all. RAQUEL LANERI

ALL PHOTOS GETTY IMAGES

Will Public School bring urban cool back into DKNY?

The biggest debut of the season: Public School designers Dao-Yi Chow and Maxwell Osborne will be taking the helm at DKNY — and taking charge of Donna Karan's legacy at large after the iconic designer stepped down from her namesake label earlier this summer. Expect the cool-kid duo to inject some attitude, youthful insouciance and gender-bending into the label.

Will Caitlyn Jenner usurp the rest of the Kardashian clan?

Caitlyn Jenner is going to be the celebrity get this season — and we bet her presence will cause even more hoopla than the rest of the Kardashian and Jenner brood. Anna Wintour, for one, will surely welcome the opportunity to sit courtside with the transgender heroine, who is certain to be quieter — and better behaved — than last season's seatmate, North West.

Who will take over for Alexander Wang at Balenciaga?

New York bad boy Alexander Wang up and quit his fancy post at French label Balenciaga in July to focus on his own label, sparking speculations about who will take his place. But after Wang's comments about his time there — "essentially I [was] just another employee," he told W Magazine — don't expect any big-name designers to be scrambling for the gig.

Will yoga pants be the new sneakers?

While style-blog celebs continue to dress to the hilt, the rest of the front row has gotten increasingly casual. Last season, it was a sea of sneakers, knit beanies and puffer coats. Now, with "sport" wear invading the runways — not to mention the climbing temps and flash floods — are editors gonna show up in their literal gym clothes?

Is fashion over Twitter?

Last season, it was declasse to be seen Instagramming the runway — this time, will tweeting your observations seem totally naff? Apparently, fashion commenters and brands aren't going on the social media platform to share news, reach fans or even just hang out anymore. And with Aliza Licht leaving her post at DKNY PR Girl and Erika Bearman no longer tweeting at Oscar PR Girl, is Fashion Twitter on its last legs?

Joan Smalls proves jeans can be sexy. GETTY IMAGES

Model wardrobe

Supermodel Joan Smalls and True Religion add some edge to your everyday uniform.

TINA CHADHA
@TinaatMetro
tina.chadha@metro.us

When you're a world-famous supermodel who's walked for some of the biggest names in fashion today, where do you turn for inspiration for your own line?

"My closet," says Joan Smalls with a smile. "Being around so many creative people, [we models] see firsthand how [designers] deal with fabrics, silhouettes, with what's in — and how they think. And you absorb your surroundings."

Last season, Smalls took this on-the-field training and spun it into her first-ever collection for True Religion: a 16-piece capsule based on her sporty-yet-fierce off-duty aesthetic. For fall, the two have teamed up again for an even bigger collection launching today.

So what did the 27-year-old learn from her design debut?

"Women want to feel sexy," says Smalls. "They want to feel beautiful and confident no matter what they wear — and you always obtain that look with easy pieces."

For the Puerto Rican native, who describes her own style as "easy-going chic," those key pieces include buttery soft T-shirts with leather sleeves, cropped neoprene sweatshirts and skinny jeans with edgy gunmetal zipper details, all in vampy shades of inky black.

Below, she tells us about her key pieces — and (crucial!) how to pick the jeans that will most flatter your butt.

Why a peacock print sweatshirt?

"My parents lived in Connecticut when I was born, and then they came to Puerto Rico and decided to get six acres of land and every single animal you can imagine. They had cows, dogs, turkeys, chickens, pigs, ducks and peacocks. I remember picking up the feathers and playing with them. They're such a graceful animal."

Smalls' denim styling tips

1 "Always make sure your butt looks good in the jeans," says Smalls. "It's all about the pocket size." (To wit, the model asked that the True Religion horseshoe logo, on the back pockets, be made smaller on her line.)

2 Pick a classic wash. "I need a pair of jeans that five years from now I can still go back to it," she says.

Five minutes with Adam Selman

TINA CHADHA
@TinaatMetro
tina.chadha@metro.us

Rihanna's fashion BFF might be known for campy antics and that internet-breaking sheer Swarovski crystal gown the pop star wore to the 2014 CFDA awards. But this season, Adam Selman's got a new surprise.

What's your starting point for Spring '16?

I'm looking at the idea of exposure. I'm always trying to do things that people aren't expecting of me. I'm thinking of something different than fun and campy. I definitely want people to know it's for real and it's not a joke. Even though I put beehives and big makeup looks on the runway, it's cool clothes, and I want real women to wear them.

What real-women trends do you think are cool?

Girls have been into this easy thing. I haven't been able to go on vacation, so I'm only looking at girls in New York City. Everyone is wearing breezy dresses and exposing their bra. It's a cool, liberating thing that women don't need to be tucked and pulled.

What do you do in your downtime during Fashion Week?

I love TV. I didn't grow up with a TV. I'm from one of those households, super-religious. I'm catching up on movies. My boyfriend [Rihanna stylist Mel Ottenberg] is such a pop culture guru.

What are you watching?

I'm going back. I did a big "Sex and the City" run. I've started watching "Battlestar Galactica." Have you seen the "Portlandia" episode where they lose their jobs because they're binge-watching? I'm obsessed. It's such a problem. "The Comeback" is also the best show. I watched it in real time because I was such a nut the first season.

Onstage. Pop goes the opera, courtesy of the Bearded Ladies and Opera Philadelphia.

Warhol from soup to nuts

"Andy: A Popera" was planned for a Thursday through Sept. 20 run, but quickly sold out. An additional show was just added, and there will be a standby line for each performance. Tickets are available at Fringearts.com or Operaphila.org. / LUIS FERNANDO RODRIGUEZ

The new "Andy: A Popera," from Opera Philadelphia and the Bearded Ladies Cabaret troupe, is not exactly a love song for Andy Warhol.

If it were, Warhol probably wouldn't be impressed.

"David Bowie wrote a song for him and he asked Warhol, 'What do you think of my song?'" says Kristen Bailey of the Bearded Ladies. "Warhol looked down on the ground and said, 'I like your shoes.'"

Besides being socially awkward, Warhol's famed Factory left a fairly significant trail of human wreckage. Young socialite-turned-actress Edie Sedgwick died of an overdose in 1971. Andrea Feldman committed suicide in 1972. A few years earlier, Warhol was shot by Factory outsider Valerie Solanas, who fired away after she was denied the return of a script.

"We're looking at Andy through the lenses of a bunch of females," says Bailey, who stars as Edie. "His mother, Julia, is one of the most important [characters] in the Popera. Warhol became a brand and seemed untouchable, but when you see him with his mother, you realize, 'Oh, you're a human being.'

"Solanas absolutely hates him," she continues, "but Edie and Candy [Darling, another Factory star] have to go through his art machine and Candy knows she's doing it and she's willing to live with it, whatever the costs."

Warhol had a special lens for the world around him.

"Warhol may or may not have had his own intellectual agenda and what he wanted his work to elicit from people, but at the same time we also see this man who made art out of a bottle of Coke," Bailey says. "Candy Darling became an object to make art about and he treated her the same way he treated the Coke bottle. He took what's beautiful from them and left the rest on the cutting room floor."

"Andy: A Popera," which has undergone several permutations over the last few years, is composed by Heath Allen of the Bearded Ladies and Dan Visconti. John Jarboe, the Bearded Ladies founder, wrote the libretto and also directs. It's part of this year's Fringe Festival.

The work is billed as part opera, part cabaret, with singing soup cans, multiple Marilyns and a randy banana onstage in the Kensington warehouse where it will be performed. The space will replicate pre-Warhol shooting Factory life, and those who attend might find themselves part of the production.

"It's going to feel like a Factory party," Bailey says. "Someone will pass you a drink and put you onstage."

Eat a bug, save the world

Addison Lilholt wants Philadelphians to put down their cheesesteaks and cook up an eco-friendly treat he says 80 percent of the world is already eating: bugs.

"The vision of the future speaks to eating insects and saving the world," says the author and entomophagy enthusiast (yes, there's a word for eating bugs). "To approach entomophagy, it's got to be done differently than it has in the past. [We have to] make eating insects appealing."

To that end, Lilholt incorporate insects into familiar foods and flavors. He'll be passing out free bug snack samples at Greenfest Philly, celebrating its 10th anniversary this year.

"Buffalo Wing-flavored mealworms were a big hit at the Franklin Institute, so I'll definitely do those," Lilholt says. "I make a cricket flour cracker, for people who love cheese. People won't really know that there are insects in the cracker — it actually has a nutty flavor."

Along with the insect edibles, Greenfest includes activities and exhibits designed to make being environmentally conscious in your daily life seem doable.

The Franklin Institute is bringing along a kinetic sculpture: Four cyclists will be pedaling to open and close 18 blue umbrellas as a mobile art piece about climate change. The sculpture was originally made for the Kensington Kinetic Sculpture Derby.

"We named it Riders on the Storm, as a little humorous thing to bring awareness to the fact that we're getting more heavy downpours," says Raluca Ellis, an environmental scientist at the Franklin Institute and project director for its Climate and Urban Systems Partnership. "It looks really beautiful and a little surreal, because [the umbrellas] all open and close at different times. It draws a crowd very quickly. There's a lot of 'Whoa, that looks really amazing.'"

The Franklin Institute is bringing a kinetic sculture. / PROVIDED

Tree Philly, part of the mayor's Greenworks program, will also be tackling the climate change conversation. "We'll be signing people up for the yard tree giveaway," says Erica Smith Fichman of Tree Philly. "We'll be talking about how trees can help prepare us for a hotter city and cool the city down."

The festival also features over a 100 vendors, arts and crafts, rock climbing, a swap meet, food (beyond bugs), a beer garden and live music.

Aries Money and relationships are looking positive. Expand your credentials through study or travel. The more you do, the more successful you will be.

Taurus You will have trouble focusing on work early in the day, so concentrate. By re-examining what's transpired, you'll find the answers you are searching for.

Gemini Formulate a plan to help you reach your goals. This will prevent you from trying to do too much all at once. Organization will lead to success.

Cancer Personal issues will prey on your mind. Shift your focus to your career prospects. Taking on added responsibilities will bring lucrative rewards.

Leo Letting matters unfold naturally will help you avoid headaches. Instead of getting upset over what you can't control, open up to other options.

Virgo You will receive information regarding a profitable deal. Professional opportunities will open up if you make the most of your networking skills.

Libra Lighten up and have some fun. Put your professional worries on the back burner and spend time with people you care about.

Scorpio Not everyone shares your views, so keep your opinions to yourself. If you don't, you may be accused of interfering with others.

Sagittarius Don't pass up a chance to travel. Monetary gains are likely if you listen to someone with more experience.

Capricorn All work and no play will lead to dissatisfaction. Finding a balance between your personal and professional lives is crucial.

Aquarius You will be tempted to put in less effort on tasks you don't enjoy, but in the end, you'll have to redo what you didn't get right the first time.

Pisces It's time to tie up loose ends. You will receive mixed messages from someone close to you. Financial gains are coming. EUGENIA LAST

On the menu

Bar Bombon embraces staples such as yuca, empanadas and sopa de arroz con pollo from Puerto Rico, and tacos, enchiladas and guacamoles from Mexico. And while there might be chicken, beef, chorizo and even fish on the menu, all of the proteins come with telltale quotation marks indicating that they're made from organic, non-GMO, soy, grain and locally sourced tofu.

Tropical drinks and fruit juices are major players in the cuisines that Marquis looked to when opening Bar Bombon, and the locale boasts both a serious cocktail selection, heavy on the rum, tequila and mezcal, and freshly pressed juices that are offered up on their own or as mixers for some seriously good cocktails.

Latin flavors minus the meat

Nicole Marquis expands her vegan empire with Bar Bombon.

CAROLINE RUSSOCK
@MetroPhilly
letters@metro.us

Nicole Marquis was well acquainted with the corner of 18th and Moravian streets from her commute to HipCityVeg, the vegan fast-food spot that she has owned and operated since April 2012. "This corner is so incredible but it really was unattractive," she says. "You have Anthropolgie, a.kitchen, the beautiful park and [it was all] just lined with dumpsters. So I took the opportunity to develop another concept."

When a New York-based cupcake chain formerly in the narrow space closed its doors, Marquis took over, originally aiming for a vegan taqueria. She ended up with Bar Bombon, which opened late last month.

"It's such a small space that I immediately thought of a taqueria because you can make the kitchen really efficient in a small little space. And then I wanted to take an opportunity to use some of the space for a takeout window," she explains. "Then I thought, let's get some inspiration for this because I don't know how to cook Mexican food per se. I know Puerto Rican food, but I love everything in a tortilla. So I wanted to blend Latin cuisines."

Marquis' mother was born in Puerto Rico and she spent her childhood visiting the island for holidays and extended summer stays.

"I was raised in the culture. Rice, beans, avocado, tomato and fried plantains — that's my go-to," she says "Every time I go to my mom's house, that's what she has for me because I'm vegan. I always say that's my favorite meal. It's just so simple and so good."

Before opening Bar Bombon, Marquis and a few key members of her staff headed to San Juan for an intensive four-day research trip. They explored the city, taking in the local culture and color. And while Marquis is the first to note that meat plays a central role in Puerto Rican cuisine, eating a vegetable-based diet was remarkably simple.

"We really noticed that you can eat vegan here," she says. "The avocados, the fresh tomatoes, the plantains, the fruit — it was incredible. Fruits and vegetables were forward there, and that's what we're going for here."

We'll skip the jokes about needing women to show up to this one, and get straight to it: Seven local restaurants will each be creating an inventive sausage-based dish for the first South Philly Sausage Fest, benefiting the Newbold Community Development Corporation. The restaurants range from Chaat and Chai to Taproom on 19th, so expect a wide variety of sausage-y delights. Wash them all down with beers from six local breweries including Saint Benjamin and Sly Fox. And in true fall festival fashion, there will also be live music and, for the kids, a moon bounce and face painting. RACHEL VIGODA

ALL PHOTOS FAILTE IRELAND

Food festivals in Ireland

Autumn is a season of food festivals in Ireland and a good time to sample the charms of counties Cork and Kerry in the southwest before the short winter days set in.

Dingle, the most westerly town in Ireland, is a village by most standards, with a year-round population of some 2,000 souls, though this triples in the summer. In early October, as visitor numbers decline, a familiar peace descends on Dingle's triangle of colorful streets, and cars are once more outnumbered by tractors and bicycles.

The Dingle Food Festival (Oct. 2 to 4, www.dinglefood.com) is a lively event organized by local volunteers, showcasing the produce of Dingle's traditional farmers and fishermen and its many artisan food makers. Local fishermen catch tuna, scallops, mussels, crab and lobster, as well as cod, the must-have ingredient for fish and chips. The town's seafood hot spot, Out of the Blue (www.outoftheblue.ie), boasts that it will not open unless there is freshly caught fish to serve.

A thriving farmers market will introduce you to local charcuterie and cheese, home-baked bread and a range of homemade gourmet delights. These include locally brewed beer and cider, samples from Dingle's own whiskey distillery and Murphy's Ice Cream, made from local cream.

> The Dingle Food Festival features fresh seafood, local cheese, cider and other edible treats.

The streets are lined with food stalls daily during the festival, and you can also sign up for cooking demonstrations, talks on beekeeping and other traditional skills, or sample special tasting menus at local restaurants — foodies rave about the five-course menu at the Global Village restaurant (www.globalvillagedingle.com). Kerry mountain lamb, scented with wild herbs from its grazing places, is at its best, and oysters are back on the menu now that there is an "r" in the month. Dingle is also a great place for traditional music, and festival evenings are enlivened by many a free session, as musicians gather to show their paces.

While Dingle's festival is an outdoor, informal event, you will want to bring your finery to Kinsale's 39th Gourmet Festival (Oct. 9 to 11, www.kinsalerestaurants.com). U.S. Ambassador Kevin O'Malley will mingle with festival-goers and the guest of honor at the opening champagne reception is the Minister for the Marine, Simon Coveney, widely tipped as Ireland's next taioseach (prime minister). This historic seaside town, a short hop from Cork City and the airport, has 11 fine dining restaurants in its Good Food Circle, and Friday evening's 55 pound ($85) ticket includes a five-course dinner showcasing local food including West Cork's famous farmhouse cheeses — the pungent Milleens and the milder Gubbeen. Festivities conclude with a sumptuous seafood lunch on Sunday followed by dancing to a live jazz band. Cheers, or slainte, as they say in Ireland!

Natural wonders in Quechee Gorge

VERMONTVACATION.COM/DENNIS CURRAN

ISTOCK

Vermont's dramatic "Grand Canyon" is the centerpiece of an area perfect for enjoying autumn colors, unique shops and fine dining.

Quechee Gorge State Park is one of Vermont's most popular natural areas. The focal point of the park is the gorge that drops as far as 165 feet to the rapids of the Ottauquechee River. Hiking trails through the park and viewing areas along Route 4 provide endless "gotta get a shot of this" stops. There's even the mandatory scenic covered bridge over the river. From the adjacent parking lot, you can scramble to the boulders below the bridge to splash and picnic.

Adjacent to the park, the Vermont Institute of Natural Science is a great family spot. With interpretive "scavenger hunt" nature trails, a raptor rehabilitation center, a nature-themed interactive playground and a songbird aviary, it pulls off the trick of educating while entertaining.

Internationally acclaimed glassblower Simon Pearce set up his studio (www.simonpearce.com) by the covered bridge in a restored mill. It has expanded into a major commercial enterprise. He and his fellow artisans produce high-end glass housewares, vases and accent pieces. The Mill Restaurant at the glassworks overlooks the river and is renowned for its locally sourced, seasonal menu. Across the bridge, Anichini (www.anichini.com) sells colorful drapes, bed clothing, pillows and other household pieces made from fabrics and inspired by designs from across the globe.

Quechee Village (www.quecheegorge.com) is the epicenter for finding goods from Vermont and other parts of New England. You'll find Cabot Cheese, Vermont Spirits distilling Vermont Gold Vodka, Danforth Pewter, Yankee Candles, Lucky Elephant Asian Imports, a toy and train museum and an old-time country store.

Take a hot air balloon ride for a bird's eye view of colorful fall foliage.

Savor the fall foliage with a ride on a hot air balloon. Balloons Over New England (www.balloonsovernewengland.com) floats over the mountains for a panoramic view of the autumn colors.

Eagles getting healthy

Ertz, Smith back

The Eagles practiced Wednesday with Marcus Smith and Zach Ertz both back in action. Smith will be a key for defensive depth as the former first-round pick could get ample playing time at outside linebacker. Ertz, fresh off groin surgery, will also be key as an offensive weapon.

DEPTH IS KEY HEADING INTO NFL WEEK 1

Annnddddd pencils down. It's time to submit your answers to some of the summer's key position battles.

Although NFL depth charts will remain fluid throughout the season, the guys who enter Week 1 as starters have a big advantage. Namely, they get the first crack to play well and separate from the pack — and sometimes that's all these players need.

Tevin Coleman has emerged as the No. 1 back in Atlanta. / GETTY IMAGES

Touchdown Tevin

The Falcons' running game has been broken for a few years now. Adding offensive coordinator Kyle Shanahan was step one to getting that turned around, as his zone-blocking scheme has been highly effective throughout his career. So when the Falcons (and Shanahan) used a third-round pick on Tevin Coleman, a big green light should have gone off. Coleman has beaten out Devonta Freeman for the starting gig Week 1 and will bring a lot of home-run hitting upside. Freeman has the look of a situational back.

Big mess in Big D

Joseph Randle is listed atop the Cowboys' "official" depth chart. But the team declined to name a starter heading into the opener and a healthy Darren McFadden has been getting first-team reps. Lance Dunbar will also be involved on pass downs, and new addition Christine Michael is a freak talent. The team doesn't even appear to know what to expect out of their backfield, leading to a "play it by ear" or "hot hand" plan for Week 1. It's ideally a wait-and-see situation for owners.

Pickups of the week

- Tyrod Taylor, QB, Bills — A Michael Vickian athlete who can carry a fantasy box score with his legs alone.
- Matt Jones, RB, Redskins — Don't be surprised if Jones overtakes Alf Morris for the starting gig.
- Danny Amendola, WR, Patriots — With Brandon LaFell down, Amendola is ticketed for a large role right out of the gate.

No fun Funchess

Panthers coach Ron Rivera announced that Corey Brown (aka Philly) and Ted Ginn will be his starting wideouts against the Jaguars in Week 1. Don't buy that. Ginn is a one-trick pony, and Brown is an underwhelming talent with butterfingers. The only reason Devin Funchess isn't starting yet is because of a hamstring injury that hampered his preseason.

NFL preview, picks: Luck, Colts will shine

NFL. Our picks for who wins each division and why, and who will compete for Super Bowl 50.

Andrew Luck has a full arsenal of offensive weapons at his disposal this season. / GETTY IMAGES

While there is no predicting the inevitable onslaught of injuries or the rise of the next of the league's superstars — clandestine on NFL depth charts somewhere, ready to burst on to the scene — there is no harm is taking a guess as to which teams will rise to the top, and which players will nab hardware. Here are our picks:

AFC East: Patriots
If Jimmy Garoppolo was starting the first four games, the Bills and Dolphins — both improved — would have a legitimate shot here. But an uncertain offense in Buffalo and revamped defense in Miami won't be able to unseat the reigning champs and Tom Brady.

AFC North: Ravens
The Ravens have the edge with a more complete roster than the Bengals and Steelers, but both Cincinnati and Pittsburgh have the firepower to make it a dogfight, or even make it a trio of teams from the North in the playoffs.

AFC South: Colts
They may have been blown out of the water in the AFC title game (ground zero for Deflategate) but they have certainly reloaded and will be among the top teams in the entire NFL in 2015.

AFC West: Broncos
The Chiefs and Chargers are not to be trifled with, so the Broncos will likely rely more on C.J. Anderson and the ground game as a complement to aging Peyton Manning to fend off two legitimate challengers for the division crown.

NFC East: Eagles
If Sam Bradford and DeMarco Murray can stay healthy and play an entire season, there is no limit to how far this team can go. And even if not, Kelly has taken two Eagles teams to double-digit wins with a combination of Nick Foles, Michael Vick and Mark Sanchez at the helm.

NFC North: Packers
It's a three-team race up north with the Packers, favored even without Jordy Nelson, barely fending off the Lions and Vikings to win the division. The Lions could mount a serious challenge and are a real threat as a wild-card playoff team.

NFC South: Buccaneers
Like last season, no one in the NFC South really deserves a playoff spot. We'll go with Jameis Winston and Tampa Bay as Matt Ryan and Julio Jones aren't enough to carry the Falcons and Cam Newton's primary weapons are too beat up for him to win the division in Carolina single-handedly.

NFC West: Seahawks
The Cardinals aren't bad, but the Rams (too early) and the 49ers (too late) are really no threat for one of the best defenses in NFL history.

- AFC Championship: Colts over Patriots
- NFC Championship: Eagles over Packers
- Super Bowl 50: Colts over Eagles
- Defensive player of the year: J.J. Watt, Texans: Things learned about Watt from HBO's Hard Knocks: Watt can mount a goal line stand all by himself. Watt sleeps 10 hours a day and treats his body like an Olympian. Watt never stops practicing (except when he sleeps). Watt played quarterback in practice. Watt did an awesome Chris Farley impression. Back-to-back trophies for the best player in the NFL.
- Offensive player of the year: Adrian Peterson, Vikings: APete is back with a vengeance. He'll also win comeback player of the year.
- NFL MVP: Andrew Luck, Colts: Andre Johnson, T.Y. Hilton, Dwayne Allen and Frank Gore — that's plenty for Luck.
